CASE STUDY

Hannah Cecil-Harden is a director at de Gournay, a family business which was founded by her father, Claud Cecil Gurney. De Gournay makes the most beautiful hand-painted wallpapers and fabrics and the company's work is found in some of the finest buildings around the world.

As you would expect, every room of Hannah's London home has been exquisitely decorated. The property has undergone many transformations in the time that Hannah has lived there, but the most recent changes were needed to accommodate her expanding family. Hannah and her husband wanted their house to work better for life with their four young children.

CASE STUDY

All the floors of the house have been updated, but perhaps the biggest change was turning the existing basement into a playroom with adjoining utility and bathroom. Having worked with Hannah and the team at de Gournay on a previous project, Clement was delighted to be asked to manufacture the new steel doors that were included within the designs.

The new steel doors were to be painted in unique vibrant colours to match the stunning wallpapers that adorn the new space and Clement worked closely with Hannah and her team to find just the right match. All Clement bespoke steel products can be painted in specialist hues from across the entire colour spectrum – these doors demonstrate what is possible!

Hannah said: "I thoroughly enjoyed working with Clement Windows on this exciting project which was for a children's playroom. I wanted to go with bold and bright colours and they were so accommodating about this, everything about the project was handled professionally and with utmost care from conception down to a flawless install. It was an absolute pleasure to work on such a personal project with a business I have collaborated with before and I look forward to hopefully crossing paths again in the future!"
